A map section showing the Jordan Valley area. It features two main roads: Route 40, which runs north-south along the western side of the valley, and Route 38, which branches off from Route 40 further north. The map also shows the Dead Sea to the west and the Jordan River to the east. A small green dot labeled 'אשקלון' (Ashkelon) is located near the northern end of Route 40.

A map of the southern coast of Chile, showing the coastline and several rivers flowing into the sea. Three specific locations are marked with red numbers in boxes: '34' near the top, '35' in the middle, and '40' at the bottom. A dashed horizontal line extends from the 40 site across the map.

This image shows a horizontal strip of an ancient Hebrew manuscript. The text is written in black ink in a traditional Hebrew script, arranged in two columns. Above the text, there are several red ink markings, likely marginalia or headings. On the far left, the number '59' is written vertically in yellow. On the far right, the number '58' is also written vertically in yellow. The paper has a light beige or cream color.

The map displays a complex network of roads and geographical features. A prominent red line follows the eastern edge of the Negev Desert, connecting points such as Ramon Crater, the Arava Desert, and the Dead Sea area. A green line runs through the center of the Negev, connecting Be'er Sheva and the coastal plain. Major roads are numbered 62, 30, 19, 31, 32, 67, 66, 58, 57, 40, 10, 171, and 1012. The terrain is rugged with many peaks, some reaching up to 1000 meters above sea level. National parks like the Negev Desert National Park and the Arava Desert National Park are indicated. The map also shows several rivers and streams, including the Jordan River and the Dead Sea. The coastal plain is shown with its characteristic salt flats and coastal areas.
