PING ROUND MULTIScript

An affable font family with fluid stroke structure that communicates in Latin, Greek, Cyrillic, Arabic, Hebrew, Thai, Georgian, Armenian and Devanagari.

Three years after Ping, a whole-world typeface came out, becoming popular for cultural and commercial clients world-wide, receiving the Gold European Design Award, Ping Round extends the idea of a fluid stroke construction with rounding its strokes, and extending the language covered by supporting two additional writing scripts. Ping's simplified letterforms are constructed with the least number of pen strokes; for example the lowercase letters 'a', 'd', 'p', 'b' and 'g' are drawn without lifting the pen at all.

At the time of the original release, we characterised Ping, as 'a not-so geometric Sans'. The fully round terminals of Ping Round make the new typeface informal and cheeky chummy, as a counterpoint to soulless corporate communication that is a norm today. The large x-height and simplified letterforms ensure the usability and versatility of the font family even in small text sizes.

Not just the shapes of Ping Round are warm and unreserved, it is the language coverage that makes the typefaces highly accessible. This initial release supports nine writing scripts (Latin, Greek, Cyrillic, Arabic, Hebrew, Thai, Georgian, Armenian and Devanagari). These nine scripts is the new internal Typotheque standard for our Multiscript fonts, with more font families matching the character set in the future. Ping Round is a truly international typeface, supporting hundreds of languages, with the proportions of the Latin shapes adjusted to facilitate seamless integration with all the above-mentioned writing scripts; useful to designers worldwide.

Ping Round was designed by Peter Bilak, who created the Latin, Greek, Cyrillic and Armenian versions (with consultations by Khajag Apelian and Gor Jhanian), assisted by Nikola Djurek. Daniel Grumer designed the Hebrew version, Parimal Parmar designed the Devanagari, Kristyan Sarkis designed the Arabic, Akaki Razmadze designed the Georgian, and Ekaluck Peanpanawate created the Thai version. Elí Castellanos and Oscar Guerrero assisted in the font production, and Liang Hai and Roberto Arista worked on mastering and font engineering.
